THE PRINTING TELEGRAPH.

A WONDERFUL ELECTRICAL MACHINE THAT SENDS A MESSAGE AND KEEPS A COPY.

In Philadelphia was witnessed a practical test of an electrical invention which, it is claimed, will largely supplant the telephone. The instrument looks very much like a typewriter, but it has this advantage over a typewriter, that while it prints one copy, or manifold copies if desired, right before the operator's eyes, it prints exact duplicate copies at the other end of a telegraph wire, hundreds or thousands of miles away. Among other advantages which it possesses over the ordinary telegraph or telephone system is that it gives the sender an exact copy of every message that he sends and places every word right before his eyes, so that any mistake will be at once detected. It can be operated by any child who can read, and can be operated as fast as a typewriter, which is considerably faster than the Morse telegraph system. As showing the advantages that the printing telegraph possesses over anything now in use, it is claimed that a message can be transmitted to the possessor of an instrument in his absence from his office and he will find it recorded. The recording of the message at both points of sending and receiving prevents disputes as to the contents of the message. It is impossible to read by sound or to intercept a message by tapping the wires, thus rendering secrecy complete. Its absolute accuracy renders it invaluable in commercial or financial transactions, especially for bankers, merchants, railroads and all other persons requiring minute accuracy. It can be used as a stock indicator. It will duplicate the same message at any number of points and gave any number of reproductions of an original message in transfer. A correspondent in Boston, for example, can call up offices in New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore and Cincinnati and produce his copy in the office of newspapers in each place ready for the immediate use in the composing room. The instrument is both a receiver and a transmitter.

At the exhibition, all that has been claimed for the printing telegraph was apparently justified. There were two instruments in the room, but they were practically about 130 miles apart, for the wire which connected them ran from one instrument to the city of Reading and then back to the other instrument, and the same messages were printed on both instruments simultaneously. That is to say, the operator touched a key like the key of a typewriter, and a letter was printed on the paper on the instrument before him, and at the same instant the same appeared on the other instrument at the other end of the wire, over 100 miles long. It would have been the same if the wire had been 1000 miles long.

THE SCIENCE OF SILENCE.

The "Quiver" for May says:—"He who has learnt the science of silence may hide ignorance, and even require a reputation for knowledge and wisdom. A story is told of the painter Zeuxis, how he reproved a certain high priest of Great Diana of the Ephesians, who discoursed of pictures in the artists' studio, with so reckless an audacity of ignorance, that the very lads who were grinding colors could not refrain from giggling, whereupon Zeuxis said to his too eloquent friend: "As long as you kept from talking you were the admiration of these boys, who all wonder at your rich attire, and the number of your servants; but now that you have ventured to expatiate upon the arts of which you know nothing, they are laughing at you outright." Denouncing the rapid verbiage of shallow praters, Carlyle explains, "Even Triviality and Imbecility, that can sit silent how respectable are they in comparison!" It was said of one who was taken for a great man so long as he held his peace. "This man might have been a councillor of the State till he spoke, but having spoken, not the beadle of a ward." Lord Lytton tells the story of a groom married to a rich lady, and in consequent trepidation of being ridiculed by the guests in his new home. An Oxford Clergyman gave him his advice: "Wear a black coat and hold your tongue." The groom was soon considered the most gentlemanly person in the country. Silence is an excellent foil for conversation. A clever man makes his talk far more delightful by interposing occasional flashes of silence, as Sydney Smith said. Macaulay did on his return from India."

Wit and Humor.

An Irishman, writing a sketch of his life, says he early ran away from his father because he discovered he was only his uncle.

"Why," exclaimed a tourist, "a donkey couldn't climb that hill!" And then he added, "and you may rest assured I'm not going to try it."

Teacher—"How many wars were waged with Spain?" Pupil—"Six." Teacher—"Enumerate them." Pupil—"One, two, three, four, five, six."

Little boy (at the front door)—"Is the doctor in?" "Cause if he is I want to see him at once." Servant—"He's not in." "Well, just as soon as he gets home you tell him to come over to our house and take that baby off he left last week. It's in the way."

Scene—Army competitive examination. Examiner—"If King Alfred were still alive, what part would he probably take in politics of the present day?" Competitor—"If King Alfred were still alive he would be much too old to take part in politics."

A gentleman seated behind a plate of beef and beans in one of the coffee and cake saloons in New York said to the waiter, "Bring me a napkin!" The waiter shook his head dubiously. "I don't believe we've got any," he said; "but I'll ask the boss. Perhaps he'll send out for it. How do you want it cooked?"

A Highlander, under the influence of whisky, once on a very hot day went to be married by the Rev. Mr. Grant of Abernethy. The service having commenced, the bridegroom was asked, "are you willing to take this woman to be your wife?" "Yes," he replied, wiping large drops of perspiration from his face; "yes, if I got a drink."

An American, making a European tour, visited Glasgow. He boarded a passenger steamer at the Broemicklaw, and being thoroughly disgusted with the appearance and odour of the river, he accosted the captain, and said—"I say skipper, do you call this here affair a river? You should see our rivers! You bet, they'd make you starve. Why, one of them could swallow the whole of your country!" "Man, ye dinna ken whit yer talkin' about," replied the captain, with a look of scorn. "God Almighty made a' your rivers, but we made this ane ourselves."

Walking in a meadow with some ladies, a minister had the impudence to snatch a kiss from one, unperceived by the rest. She said, indignantly, "Sir I am not accustomed to such freedoms." "It will be the greater rarity then, madam." She flew from him and ran towards her mother, who, alarmed at her seeming terror, inquired what was the cause. "She has taken fright at a rash buss," says the minister. "Oh, ye idiot," quoth the mother, "go back this instant." She returned smiling, and said, "Do't again's no forbidden."

BOTH IN THE SAME PREDICAMENT.—A German citizen approached the window of a bank, and requested that a cheque payable to the order of Schweitzercase be cashed. "Ja dot's me," he nodded, reassuringly, in answer to the teller's look of inquiry. "But I don't know that you are Mr. Schweitzercase. You must get yourself identified," said the teller. "How vas dot?" "You must get some one to identify you," repeated the bank officer. "I don't know you." "Ah ja," cried John, much relieved. "Dot's all right. I don't know you nigger."

Mr. Dewar, a shopkeeper in Edinburgh, being in want of silver for a bank note, went into the shop of a neighbor of the name of Scott, whom he thus addressed:—

"Mr. Scott, Can you change me a note?" Mr. Scott's reply was—"I am not very sure but I'll see." Then, going into his back-room, he immediately returned, and added:—"Indeed, Mr. Dewar, It's out of my power, For my wife's awa' wi' the key."

CARRIED BY STORM.

GEOFFREY LAMAR.

'It's only me, mister, mocking the birds. I often do it. I can whistle, too. Listen!'

The sweetest, shrillest whistle he has ever heard takes up the air, 'Home Sweet Home,' and performs it as he could not do to save his life.

'There!' says the voice. 'I'll sing for you now, if you like. Didn't know I could sing, did you? All the Sleaford's sing, law bless you! but I only do when I feel like it. Did you ever hear "Lanigan's Ball"?''

A sweet, strong voice begins that classical, ditty, and the woods give back the melodious echo. Geoffrey Lamar listens in silent amaze. Why, the elf is a prodigy!—a musical prodigy! Where in that small, starved body has she room for a voice like that?

She finishes at last, and whistles a bar or two of the air by way of closing symphony.

'That was an awful nice book you lent me,' she goes on. 'I've read it through twice. I haven't soiled it a mite, and it's down at the mill. I—I'm lots obliged to you, you know. Didn't think you'd ever fetch it.'

She descends a branch or two from her lofty roost, and brings herself to a level with the rider.

'It is Sleaford's Joanna!' says Geoffrey, his breath nearly taken away. 'Why, you must be a witch! Who taught you to sing and whistle, and twitter like a bird, in this fashion?'

'Nobody taught me—taught myself. It's just as easy as nothin' at all.'

'Can you sing anything but "Lanigan's Ball"?''

Joanna nods.

'Know a hymn. Lora heard your mar sing it at her meetin.' Goes like this.

The silvery childish treble uplifts and peals out with a force that fairly amazes him. The hymn, from those lips, amazes him still more. It is 'Rock of Ages.'

'Rock of ages, cleft for me,
Let me hide myself in thee!'

How strangely from those impish lips sound the grand, strong words!

'Nothing in my hand I bring.
Simply to thy cross I cling;
Naked, come to thee for dress,
Helpless, look to thee for grace.
Rock of ages, cleft for me,
Let me hide myself in thee?'

'Upon my word, you are a marvel!' Geoffrey says, catching his bated breath. 'And so you like the book? Would you like another?'

'Oh! I ejaculated Joanna, rapturously; wouldn't I just!'

'Well, you shall. I will leave it this evening at the mill. Who thought you to read? Have you been at school?'

'School! Joanna echoes scornfully; 'I guess not. Catch old Giles sending me to school. Not but that I'd like to go, mind you. No, Jud teaches me. He ain't so bad, Jud ain't don't curse nor hit me like the rest. Taught me some writin' too, but not much.'

'And you would like to learn more?'

'You bet! But tain't no use. Old Giles would beat me to death if I spoke of such a thing.'

'Do you mean to say he really beats and swears at you?'

Joanna laughs shrilly.

'Oh, no, not at all! He wouldn't hurt nobody! Look here, mister!'

She uncovers her shoulders by a dexterous hitch, and shows him long black and blue welts purpling the flesh.

'Did that last night; was drunk, you know. Beat me till I couldn't stir.'

'What had you done?' Geoffrey asks, sick at heart.

'Nothin' tall. Didn't fetch the boot-jack quick enough. Got me into a corner where I couldn't wriggle away, and lashed me till Jud took the whip out of his hand. Says he'll beat my souls out next time. May if he likes. I don't care.'

She begins to whistle defiantly, but tears of pain and wrath well up in spite of her, and she winks them angrily away.

'Poor little soul!' the lad says, strongly touched. And at the pitying words all her bravado breaks down, and she suddenly covers her face, and sobs wildly:

'I wish I was dead—I do! I wish I was dead and buried!'

'Hush,' he says, distressed, 'that is wicked. Don't cry; I am going to try and do something for you. I am going to help you if I can. I am sure you would be a good girl if you had a chance. It is a shame—a shame! They use you worse than a dog!'

'Oh, dear! oh, dear! oh, dear!' the poor little wretch sobs. It is the first time in her life the floodgates have thus been opened. She cries wildly now, as she does all things, as if her very heart were bursting. It is the first time any one has ever been sorry for her, and the sympathy goes near to break her heart.

'Do not cry,' he says. 'Look here, Joanna, I will leave the book for you to-night, and I will come to see you again in—let me see—two days. Now, good-bye, and do not get whipped, if you can, till I come back.'

With which the youthful knight-errant of tattered damsel in distress turns his horse's head, and rides slowly and thoughtfully homeward, revolving in his mind a decidedly bold project, which, if carried into effect, bids fair to alter the whole future life of Sleaford's Joanna.

CHAPTER XI.

IN WHICH MR. ABBOTT ASSERTS HIMSELF.

The light of the August sunset lies low over Abbott Wood as young Geoffrey Lamar rides slowly up the shaded avenue, still lost in thought. And yet not so deeply absorbed but that the growing beauty of green and sunny slope, scented rose-thicket, waving depths of fern and bracken, ruby lines of light slanting through brown holes of trees, strike him with a keen sense of delight. It is his, all this fair domain, this noble inheritance; no birth-right but the generous gift promised him often by the master of Abbott Wood. And that sense of proprietorship accents vividly his pleasure in its green loveliness, as he rides up under those tall, arching elms. He is not an embryo artist, as is Frank Livingston. He does not rant of light and shade, of breadth and perspective, of tone and color, and backgrounds, and chien-oscuro, or the rest of the art-jargon in which his flighty friend excels, but he loves every tree, and stone, and copice, and flower, and bird about the place, and means, please Heaven, it shall be his home, wander whether he may through life.

Mr. Abbott is in the stables, smoking and lecturing the grooms, when Geoffrey resigns his horse to the boy who caters to him. He nods affectionately to his step-son. It has been said he is fond and proud of him—proud after an absurd fashion, that the lad is a gentleman by birth and breeding, while resenting at the same time the grave reserve the youth maintains between them. But Geoffrey is in a grateful and gentle mood at this moment; moreover, he is in the character of a suppliant, and returns his stepfather's greeting and cordiality.

'I've been deucedly put out just now, Geoff, my boy,' Mr. Abbott says, quitting the stables with him; 'not so much with these fellows, though they are a set of lazy dogs, who shirk work whenever they can. But I was down at Cooper's this afternoon, and the way that place is going to rack and ruin under that shiftless lot is enough to turn a man's hair gray. I gave old Job a bit of my mind let me tell you, and they go out next quarter-day, by the Lord Harry! Mind you, Geoff, when you're master here, keep no tenants on your land like the Coopers. Out with 'em, neck and crop!'

'Cooper is not a model farmer,' says Geoffrey, coolly, 'but in comparison with another of your tenants, his place is paradise. I mean Sleaford's—the Red Farm.'

A dark frown bends Mr. Abbott's brows. He takes out his cigar and looks at the boy.

'Sleaford's!' he growls. 'What do you know of Sleaford's? What takes you there?'

'Frank Livingston took me the other evening. They had a dance of some sort. But I have passed the place often and can see. Besides, everyone is talking of it, and wondering you do not send them adrift.'

WEDNESDAY, JULY 14, 1886.

THE ANNUAL EXAMINATION AT ST. BONAVENTURE'S COLLEGE.

The annual distribution of prizes took place at St. Bonaventure's to-day. The opening festivities connected therewith commenced yesterday with athletic sports, by some of the students. The grounds around the College were decorated with flags and avenues of bushes improvised for the occasion. At the outer end of the main avenue the green flag of Erin flew on one side and the Union Jack of Old England on the other. On the inner end of the avenue were hoisted the Papal arms and the pink, white and green of Terra Nova. At 6.30 the grounds were thrown open to the public and a vast concourse assembled. In a short time the students appeared, and the exercises commenced by performances on the horizontal bar, the rings and trapeze. The following students took part in these exercises and went through their parts with military accuracy: John Boggan, T. Bearn, Michael O'Toole, W. Collins (St. John's), W. Hogan, Joseph Long, Henry Clinton, M. McLoughlan, Aidan McLoughlan, and N. Brown. Next came music drill, presided over by Professor Bennett, which was gone through with military precision. The third part consisted of a hurdle race, and jumping with stones. The boys taking part in these performances, were M. Boland, C. Kielly, T. Bearn, Joseph Long, M. O'Toole and M. Murray. Great swiftness and agility were displayed by the boys in this contest. Mr. O'Toole, a young fellow of splendid physique, outdistanced his competitors in this part of the performance. At 8.30, the programme was finished, after which numerous sky rockets were sent into the air by the delighted boys in honor of the occasion. Professor Bennett's Band which was in attendance, discoursed sweet music at intervals all through the evening. The display all round was a successful one and we congratulate both the President and teachers of the College and the parents of the students. We will give a full report of to-days exercises in the Library to-morrow.

THE COUNTRY IS SAFE!

The public will, no doubt, be rejoiced to hear of the vast and heroic stroke of business discharged by the Government in the appointment of Mr. Alfred Penny to the Colonial Secretaryship. The event was timed most happily in celebration of the anniversary of the battle of the Boyne, and the Orange Hall was gaily decorated with a double supply of bunting, in honor of the Penny appointment. The appropriate and regular salute was omitted in the excitement that spread abroad as soon as the announcement was made, but it will be duly observed to-day. It was high time for Mr. Penny to get the reward of his celebrated "amendment" carried two years ago; and which all Orangemen remembers with loyal pride. Now the country is safe, no more talk about want, bad fisheries &c. &c. Mr. Penny is Colonial Secretary, what more can any one want! Think of all the ability and statesmanship this well-known statesman of Carbonear brings to his new office! Surely the new era has dawned for Newfoundland, and let the New Era Grounds have more electric lights, and new dances, and new music to-night, for the best of all reasons. Penny's appointment is certain, and all the clouds have rolled by.—Com.

The steamer "Curlew" will leave for the western route to-morrow morning. She goes only as far as Channel this trip.

Late Mail News.

We have received papers by to-day's mail to the 6th inst. The following summary is from the London Daily "Chronicle," (Unionist.)

The Queen yesterday received the representatives of the Colonial and Indian Exhibition, at Windsor Castle. The Prince and Princess of Wales, the Duke and Duchess of Connaught, and other members of the Royal Family, as well as a large number of those representing Her Majesty's household, were present at the reception.

Serious fighting has occurred between Turks and Montenegrins on the frontier. The attack is said to have been begun by a body of armed Turks who crossed into Montenegrin territory and committed various acts of depredation. Eventually, however, the Turks were driven back with the loss of many killed. The Montenegrins lost seven killed and 13 wounded.

At yesterday's sitting of the Panama Canal Lottery Loan Committee M. de Lesseps asserted it to be possible to complete a level canal for the amount of the proposed loan, and within three years. M. Jacquier, the director of the canal works, on the other hand, maintained that it would be necessary to construct the canal with locks to keep within the limit of time and expenditure.

Prince Albert Victor yesterday distributed the medallions and certificates in connection with the St. John Ambulance Association to the successful students of the Polytechnic classes, Regent-street. Sir V. Kennett Barrington presided, and there was a good attendance.

The Premier walked from Hawarden Castle to early service at the parish church yesterday morning, and in the afternoon he took walking and carriage exercise in company with Mrs. Gladstone. The right hon. gentleman was kept busily engaged during the greater part of the day in receiving; and answering telegrams.

The Marquis of Hartington addressed a crowded meeting of electors at Chesterfield yesterday afternoon, in support of the candidature of Mr. A. Barnes, Mr. C. Markham, and Mr. C. Hilton Seeley, for divisions of Derbyshire. The noble marquis also spoke at a meeting of electors for the Rossendale division for North-East Lancashire, held in the Assembly Rooms, Crawshawbooth, last evening.

It was announced yesterday morning that Mr. Labouchere and Mr. Bradlaugh had been returned for Northampton, and Mr. W. L. Bright for Stoke. A large number of metropolitan constituencies polled yesterday, and, from the results declared last night, it appeared that Lord Charles Beresford, Mr. Seager Hunt, Colonel Hamilton, General Goldsworthy, and Sir Charles Russell retained their seats at Marylebone, Rotherhithe, Hammersmith, and South Hackney. Sir Charles Dilke and Mr. Thorold Rogers were unseated for Chelsea and Bermondsey respectively. The day's results showed a considerable gain for the Conservatives, especially in the metropolis.

An alarming collision occurred on the Caledonian Railway, near Holytown, yesterday morning, between a Glasgow and an Edinburgh express train. About 40 passengers sustained injuries, and a great deal of damage was done to rolling stock, and the main line was blocked.

At a meeting of the Corporation of Dublin, yesterday, Mr. T. D. Sullivan was appointed Lord Mayor for the year 1887.

Two longshoremen, named John and Edward Gulliver, of Deptford, were yesterday fined £234 4s. 6d., being the treble value and duty of 244lb. of tobacco and 7lb. cigars, which they were charged with smuggling. In default of payment six months' imprisonment was inflicted.

Robert Henry Chinn was yesterday charged on remand, at the Hampton Petty Sessions, on suspicion of causing the death of Annie Hale by drowning her in the Thames near Staines, on the 8th ult. It was stated that the Treasury had now taken up the prosecution, and the prisoner was further remanded.

A large and fashionable company assembled at Lord's yesterday to witness the annual cricket match between Oxford and Cambridge, and when play ceased for the day Oxford in the first innings had scored 191, whilst Cambridge had lost four wickets for 95. Several thousand persons were also attracted during the afternoon to the old Trafford Ground, Manchester, where the Australians met a team representing England. The former were dismissed for 205, and when stumps were drawn for the day the Englishmen were credited with 36 for one wicket.

There was very little business in the Stock Markets yesterday, but the tone generally prevailing was firm. The Home Funds were steady, while several descriptions of foreign loans were higher, Spanish being especially strong. In the Home Railway market an upward tendency was displayed, and American lines changed hands at an improvement. Grand Trunk stocks, however, lost ground. Mexican were without material change. At the Bank sovereigns to the number of 14,000 were received from China, &c.

THE IRISH BATTLE IN SCOTLAND.

Mr. T. A. Dickson spoke on the night of July 2nd, in the Exchange Hall, Hawick, in support of Mr. Alexander Brown, who is carrying on a most determined contest with Sir George Trevelyan.

Mr. Blake encountered a contingent from Ulster Orangemen last night at a public meeting in Kilmarnock Burghs, at which Professor Sturrocks (Ministerial candidate) obtained a unanimous vote of confidence. When Mr. Blake rose the Orangemen commenced booing and evidently contemplated suppressing him. Mr. Blake, good humouredly retorted that he was accustomed to these manifestations of disapprobation. He had experienced every description of electioneering except being heckled, and he appealed to the interruptors, if they were not afraid of the arguments, to hear, and then be kind enough to heckle him. He would not be afraid to answer any questions. This calmed and amused the meeting, and Mr. Blake said the curse of Orangeism had followed the Irish to Scotland. Numbers of his poor industrious Catholic countrymen here had told him that their only cause of complaint was the hostility of their Orange countrymen. Scotch Presbyterians and Protestants received and treated them well, but Ulster Orangemen did all they could against them without provocation. This statement produced another outburst of interruption, but Mr. Blake proceeded in delivering a speech lasting over half an hour, and at its close was enthusiastically cheered by the entire meeting.

This is one of many instances now occurring daily which mark the greatly extended popularity that one week's close experience of Irish representatives has produced in West Scotland. Another striking instance is a cordial appeal to Mr. O'Kelly to address a great amalgamation meeting on behalf of the Glasgow Ministerial candidate, on Glasgow green to-morrow. The meeting promises to be a large gathering. It is not an Irish demonstration, but is being organized by Scotch Liberals. Mr. O'Kelly has consented to attend and speak, and Mr. John Ferguson unexpectedly appeared last night at a meeting in the Argyll Hall, Camlachie division of Glasgow, and spoke vigorously for the Ministerial candidate, Mr. Watt, from the same platform as Mr. Abraham. Mr. Ferguson is also canvassing. Mr. O'Kelly and Mr. Jordan spoke in Greenock. It is reported that Mr. John O'Connor Power is coming to Scotland as a Gladstonian Liberal. Mr. Blake is to-day in Edinburgh on organization work. The significant Scotch elections will not take place till Monday.

SUFFERINGS AT SEA.

Particulars were received at Liverpool, July 5th, of the total wreck of the French barque Guichen, at Bird Island, Australia, and the drowning of five of her crew. The survivors were only rescued after undergoing extreme privation in an open boat. The vessel got aground, and two boats were launched. One of the boats was swamped, and five of the occupants drowned. The captain and four others got into the second boat, and remained by their stranded craft all night. In the morning there was not a vestige of the wreck to be seen, neither could they see anything of the bodies of their late comrades. The survivors with but little food or water put to sea, and after five days they were fallen in with by the schr. Jessie Matilda and rescued. The men were then almost famished, and could not have endured their sufferings much longer. The schr. subsequently landed the men at Keppel Bay. They were quite destitute but were cared for by the colonial authorities.

RAILWAY DISASTER IN SCOTLAND.

A terrible railway collision took place near Holytown, on the Caledonian Railway, July 5th, between the ten o'clock express from Edinburgh and the eleven o'clock express from Glasgow. Many carriages were completely wrecked, and a large number of passengers have been injured, some severely. Peter Ferguson, driver, of Carstairs, had both his legs broken, and is not expected to recover. The main line is still blocked. The local ambulance corps rendered valuable help.

The Glasgow correspondent of the Press Association telegraphs that a serious collision occurred yesterday morning on the Caledonian Railway, near Holytown, between the ten o'clock express from Edinburgh to Glasgow, and the eleven o'clock express from Glasgow to Edinburgh. The Glasgow train was ascending an incline when the axle of the locomotive broke, and the train left the rails and crossed the road to the other line, at Fulwood Junction, where the Edinburgh train, coming down the gradient, ran into it. The Edinburgh engine was wrecked, and the sides of several carriages were crushed in. Peter Ferguson, engine driver, of Carstairs, had both legs broken, and the others injured were John Keenan, of Glasgow, who was riding in a horse brake, leg injured; Mrs. Andrew, of Glasgow, injury to head; William Donnelly, of Crawford-street, Greenock, slightly injured; John Fleming, an elderly gentleman, belonging to Wigan, travelling from Glasgow, injury to his chest; George Forsyth, driver of the Glasgow train, slightly injured; and Matthew Efendi, of Genoa, slightly injured. Two of the injured returned to Greenock by the three o'clock train. Some of the passengers in the train from Edinburgh could only be released from their compartments by the use of a hatchet.

The attempted Triple Murder near Cardiff.

John Carey, one of the three men who were shot on Saturday night week, June 26th, in a field near the Cardiff by a man named David Jeans, with whose courtship of a girl they had interfered, died, July 5th, in the infirmary. The bullet had penetrated the skull of the deceased man and lodged in the brain. Trepanning had been resorted to, but in vain. Jeans will now be charged with having caused his death.

A free fight ensued between sympathizers of the Army and these boys, which was quashed on the arrival of the police. No arrests were made as the combatants could not be located in the crowd.

A RUNAWAY HORSE.—A horse belonging to Mr. T. McGrath, with two of his children, a little boy and girl in a waggon attached—took flight near Rawlin's Cross yesterday afternoon, and galloped wildly down Rennie's Mill Road. Near Mr. Rothwell's Cottage, the little girl was violently thrown out, her body coming in contact with a telephone pole by the road side. Dr. Fred White, who happened to be passing at the time jumped from his carriage, and had the apparently insensible child brought into Mr. Rothwell's. In a short time the Dr. re-appeared and assured the anxious bystanders that the child was all right and had only received a slight ankle bruise. The horse meanwhile had been caught by a man down at Rennie's Bridge. The little boy in the carriage was considerably frightened but he was otherwise all right.
